I teach English-speaking, writing and developing and giving English-oral presentations.

Working in collaboration with faculty from Suzuka University of Medical Sciences, I recently co-authored the textbook, Basic English for Health Care Workers, (Ohmsha Publishing, Tokyo, March 2020, ISBN: 978-4-274-22489-8). This vocational-specific reading comprehension textbook is designed for nursing students with content focused on medical specialists engaged in their respective professions.

My previous research (see <https://researchmap.jp/read0133750/>) has focused on techniques to help improve English-oral communication courses at NITSC in terms of factors such as the importance of gender differences in learning, group composition in facilitating a positive study environment, and myriad teaching methods to improve the educational experience of Japanese students being taught a second language by a foreign teacher.

I am currently co-authoring a general-use English grammar textbook designed to be used by Japanese English-language teachers and helping to develop NITSC's "Global Engineering Program".
